

Thirty Years of Systems Change for Texans

Texas Appleseed strengthens the public systems Texans rely on every day.

For three decades, the organization has brought together legal expertise, research, and coalition leadership to improve policies affecting millions of Texans.

Rather than addressing individual cases alone, Texas Appleseed works to fix the systems that create those problems in the first place. The organization's work spans education, disaster recovery, financial protections, housing, and justice reform.

When systems work better, entire communities benefit—not just today, but for generations to come. That means more families stay housed, more students stay in school, and more Texans have a fair shot at stability.

Impact to Date

- Millions of students remained in school as disciplinary practices improved
- Billions in disaster recovery funds reached families rather than being delayed or diverted
- Millions of dollars stayed with Texans targeted by predatory financial practices
- Millions in taxpayer dollars saved by reducing ineffective criminal & juvenile justice programs
- Texas policy innovations helped inform reforms nationally
